

DEATH LIST IS GROWING DAILY

THREE DEAD, TWO DYING AND A THOUSAND INJURED.

TROOPS MAY BE USED YET

If Strike Is Not Called Off Then the Authorities May Ask
State Aid.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 23.—Three are dead, two more lying at the point of death and more than a thousand injured is the toll exacted by the reign of lawlessness in this city the past three days. The third death occurred early this morning.

The authorities have not as yet decided upon the mobilization of the militia of the state in Philadelphia, but unless the rioting ends soon this will be done.

There were a few disturbances and some shooting this morning, but no serious results.

The treatment of the members of the state Fenian club, the city troops who were yesterday attacked by a large mob, has caused considerable comment that the strike has reached a stage where state troops are absolutely necessary. It is probable that aside from the troops in the city other regiments will also be ordered out if it is deemed necessary.

Meanwhile the city officials will give ample protection to the management of the car lines if they desire to run their cars. The car company also makes an official statement that everything is being handled in a manner as good as can be expected and that they have more cars running and more men at work than in the past three days.

INSURGENT VICTORY HAS BEEN REPORTED

Provisional Army Said to Have Won Great Victory in Nicaragua.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 23.—Victories of immense importance to the insurgents in Nicaragua are told in a despatch received today at the state department.

Gen. Chamorro with the main division of the insurgents, has invaded the lines of the government forces sent out to check him and by a flank movement has taken the city of Granada.

The Chamorro family is very powerful there and the capture of this city is a move of importance.

It is inferred that Gen. Estrada, once believed to be going in the direction of Greytown, is marching to make a junction with Gen. Chamorro and attack Managua.

The loss of government troops is said to have been terrible in the guerrilla warfare which has raged for the last few days.

The despatches say that after the engagement of the nineteenth several of unburied dead lay upon the fields. The losses to the provisionals were slight.

BOY BANDIT HOAL ON TRIAL TODAY

For the Murder of J. H. Fawcett, Cachier of Merchants Bank of New Albany, Ind.

Corydon, Ind., Feb. 23.—The case of Thomas Jefferson Hoal, the youthful bandit whose murderous exploits aroused the whole of southern Indiana and northern Kentucky last November, was called for trial in the Harrison circuit court here today. The trial has attracted numerous lawyers, witnesses and other visitors, the almost unprecedented gathering recalling recollections of the days far distant when Corydon was quite a little metropolis and the seat of government of Indiana.

Hoal's trial, which was brought here on change of venue from the Floyd circuit court, is expected to occupy several weeks. Able counsel has been retained to defend the young desperado who during his 'career' months' confinement in the reformatories at Jeffersonville, has become very repentant. It is expected that a plea of insanity will be made the basis of defense.

The charge upon which Hoal is to be tried is the murder of J. H. Fawcett, cashier of the Merchants National Bank of New Albany. On the morning of November 11 last young Hoal entered the bank and after commanding everybody to throw up their hands, 'and get in the vault,' began shooting. Cashier Fawcett died almost instantly after being shot through the neck and chest. John K. Woodward, president of the bank, was shot through the stomach and for days lingered between life and death.

Following the shooting the murderer made his escape from the bank and jumping into an automobile that stood near by he commanded the negro chauffeur to drive away at full speed. The chauffeur, paralyzed by fear, failed to obey the command. Hoal then fired a shot into the automobile body, jumped from the automobile and sped down the street. Arriving at the river front he jumped into a skiff with the evident intention of crossing to the Kentucky side in the Ohio river. He was overtaken in the middle of the river by a party of officers who pursued him in a fast motor boat. When the murder of the bank cashier became known there was some talk of lynching the prisoner, but he was removed for safe keeping from the police station in New Albany to the reformatory in Jeffersonville.

ALLEN STARTED FOR HIS PRISON TODAY

Wrecker of the Mineral Point Bank
Leaves for Ft. Leavenworth Prison.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 23.—Phil Allen, Jr., wrecker of the First National bank of Mineral Point, Wis., whose acts of frenzied finance ruined hundreds of depositors and furnished the federal government one of the worst cases of the kind ever on record, was taken to the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., this afternoon by United States Marshal H. J. Flint. He is under sentence for ten years.

The decision to get Allen out of the way now, instead of holding him until the calling of the conspiracy cases against President Calvert Spensley, Mrs. Edith L. Allen (the banker's wife), Miss Addie Jackson (her sister) and Guy Ito, (their brother-in-law), was made as a result of discovery of secretly written letters in which Allen attempted to frame up deals against the receiver for his estate, the Central Wisconsin Trust company at Madison, with the purpose of concealing stocks and retaining them in the name of relatives.

By these means Allen is more than ever revealed as a prince of criminals of the most clever type, and the attorneys and federal officials in charge of the case have been amazed at the depths of duplicity to which he has gone. Two letters now in the hands of Richmond, Jackson & Swanson, attorneys for the trustee, which were intercepted by clever work by Sheriff John H. Halbach, are evidence of the most daring and complete kind of Allen's bold attempt to "hoodwink" the government and his creditors.

Early in January a Milwaukee lawyer who visited Allen in his cell in the Dane county jail on legal business, took from Allen two letters to mail, the object being to despatch them from another city. Two weeks later the sheriff intercepted two more letters addressed to the same people. Allen had given them to a friend, an elderly man and an old acquaintance, to mail, from whom the sheriff took them as a result of careful work.

The letters disclose a scheme to conceal and retain assets that for all-around cleverness and boldness cannot be beaten. Allen sought the aid of each in a scheme to juggle stocks and deceive the receiver. The scheme is intricate in its details and took a master mind to work it out. In the letters Allen gave expression to a deep resentment towards the receiver and attorneys for taking the stocks from his wife.

CHURCH AND THE LABOR QUESTION

WAS DISCUSSED AT SOCIAL UNION CLUB MEETING LAST NIGHT.

TALKS WERE INTERESTING

Speakers Talked on Labor and Church Sides of Question in Very Able Manner.

The responsibility of the church to better industrial conditions of the laboring man and the church's responsibility to the wage-earners was quite fully discussed from the church and the labor sides of these questions by the speakers at the meeting of the Social Union club at the Y. M. C. A., building last evening. Nearly a hundred men attended the meeting to enjoy the supper and the program which followed. Rev. L. A. McIntyre was the leader of the meeting.

A few introductory remarks concerning the subject of the evening's discussion were made by the leader, and then Prof. T. M. Knudson of the high school presented the viewpoint of the laborer with regard to the responsibility of the church in bettering industrial conditions.

Prof. Knudson told how the church had in the two thousand years of its existence been the great power for the betterment of conditions socially, but that there had been times when the church failed to exercise this power and had declined. Such a crisis as this, he declared, the church now faces.

"There are several reasons for this," he declared, "one of which is that the church of today has lost control over a large part of the working class. The laboring classes are not only indifferent but hostile to the church, and labor has some justification for the attitude which it has assumed."

"Is it any wonder that the worker opposes the church when he feels that the church is doing nothing to help him? The utterances of the ministers are bridled by capital or the influence which capital has and the modern church is composed entirely of the wealthy or middle classes, or of the people who serve them. The church recognizes the condition of the poor and does very little to better things, taking Christ's saying, 'The poor ye have with ye always,' too literally. The church fails to see the truth in socialism and the ideals of the working man and points out only the errors. The consequence is that these two great altruistic movements are constantly opposed."

"The real danger we have in the church today is of its becoming a mere class organization. The church must preach the doctrine of responsibility of individuals to society, not that of individuals to individuals. It must seek to bring together all classes and not recognize the condition of the poor as a matter of course."

In refuting some of the statements made by Prof. Knudson, Rev. J. W. Laughlin, who gave the church view of the question, said that things are pretty bad, but not as bad as they have been, and that while there was truth in the statements made by labor leaders they were a great deal overdrawn.

"There has been a vast change of conditions in two thousand years," said Rev. Laughlin. "There was a time when the laboring man was a slave, but there has been a change, due to a certain power. The church is a body of men that bear with them the spirit of Jesus Christ. That is the power that wrought the change. There never was a time as in the present day, when there were more people at work seeking to better the conditions of mankind."

"The church comes face to face with crisis but it masters these and goes on stronger than ever. The church or the bible does not go into the details of life. The business of the church is to build up a character that is strong. The reason that the characters of men and women are not strong is that they have not followed these principles enough."

"That the church is not doing all that it can do we are ready to admit. The church is not antagonistic to any but stands for the things it must stand for, and should stand for righteousness, truth, honesty, and respect for human rights."

"The second part of the discussion, the question of 'The Responsibility of the Church to the Industrial Laborer,' was taken up by R. C. Cobb and Dr. David Denton.

Mr. Cobb took the side of labor, and in his speech said that the question was a very important one. "The church," said he, "must seek that close contact with men that exists between man and men. The workingman who performs his daily duty with honesty and cheerfulness is worthy of honor and respect everywhere. No laboring man can help comparing his own condition with that of some other who has more wealth or power than he. The labor world does not want anything more than to be received on an equal footing with other men of the land. The church should be the common meeting ground for men of all classes. Theology will never do as much as the example of Him, who died for men. The industrious man is a good citizen. Let us extend the hand of the church to all men to help all men and make this a better community to live in."

Dr. Denton, in his opening remarks, said that he was reminded of Mr. Roosevelt's story of a cougar hunt, and that he felt as if he had been "sliced" on Mr. Cobb's side. "We preachers are just human. My sympathies are all with the laboring man, for the simple reason that the working man is the more defenseless one. Capital, by its accumulated riches, is already in possession of power. A collar has to sell his day's work," Dr. Denton told of the labor movement in England and how the leaders in it were either ministers or Christian men.

"On the other hand in America it has been an entirely different thing," said the speaker. "It looks as if the Christian people and the church did not get the ears of the workingmen. It is, however, unfair to look only on one side of the question. There are dozens of good men in the forefront of the movement for the betterment of the working man's condition. I believe strongly in environment and that in some environments it is impossible for one to have a good character. I believe the church exists for making conditions better. We should show a poor knowledge of raising the wages would better the physical or moral condition of the men." The speaker cited an instance which occurred in a town in Great Britain, where a raise in wages did not make the laborers and wealthier, but made the fortunes of twenty-eight saloonkeepers. "Do I say that the workingmen should not get a raise in wages. No, but he must have moral character, education and the discipline of self-control that he may get the benefit of the increase. One of the most helpful things said was the utterance of Mr. Cobb that the working man does not want to be met by the minister except on equal terms with the merchant and the banker."

"We want to get near to the working man. I feel that the church ought even to go out of the way to show sympathy to the working man and his family and they have a hard lot. We ought to sympathize with them but not do anything for flattering them. The workingman must be told their weaknesses. The trouble with us is, we're afraid to face the facts of life. It has been said that wealth depends entirely on labor, but it is not so. The inventor and the manufacturer will make more by their efforts in a week than a thousand working men in a year. The working men do not make the wealth of the world. Although we must sympathize with the working man and realize his position, we must also sympathize with the capitalist and realize his position. There is truth on both sides and elemental facts and if the Christian minister tries to bring together and alleviate these two conflicting interests, it is all he can be expected to do."

"The Temperance Question" was the subject chosen for the March meeting and Rev. T. D. Williams was selected as the leader. It was also decided to have a committee of five to attend to the details of the Ladies' Night meeting and the appointment of the members of the committee has been left to Rev. McIntyre.

Frank Mathews of Charles City, Ia., Who Once Resided in Monroe, Visits City Again.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Monroe, Wis., Feb. 22.—Frank Mathews, twenty-five years ago a resident of Monroe, and now connected with the Sherman Nursery Co. of Charles City, Ia., not in his appearance here yesterday for the first time in seventeen years. His visit furnished him a great deal of amusement as he approached old friends whom he remembered, but who did not recognize him. It will be remembered that back in 1888 Mr. Mathews delivered an oration at the graduation exercises of the high school that has never before or since been equaled at a commencement in Monroe. When he was 17 years old he delivered the Fourth of July oration at the public exercises held on the square. Upon his removal to Iowa he engaged in the hotel business at Des Moines, and recently sold out and accepted a position with the Sherman Nursery Co.

Nienstedt in the presence of seventy or more relatives and friends. Misses Mable Steussy and Ella Kreuger acted as flower girls. Miss Kate Kreuger was bridesmaid and Fred Babler best man. The bride and groom left on a wedding trip to Toledo, Ohio. Upon their return they will begin housekeeping on a farm which the groom recently bought near Orangeville.

(I TOOK PE-RU-NA.)

MISS NINETTE PORTER. Miss Ninette Porter, Brantree, Vermont, writes: "I have been cured by Peruna."

"I had several hemorrhages of the lungs. The doctors did not help me much and would never have cured me. I saw a testimonial in a Peruna almanac of a case similar to mine, and I commenced using it. I wrote to Dr. Hartman for advice. He kindly gave me free advice."

"I was not able to wait on myself when I began using it. I gained very slowly at first, but I could see that it was helping me."

"After I had taken it a while I commenced to raise up a stringy, sticky substance from my lungs. This grew less and less in quantity as I continued the treatment."

"I grew more fleshy than I had been for a long time, and now I call myself well."

A Bad Cough. Mrs. Emma Martin, Odessa, Mo., writes: "I cannot thank you enough for curing me."

"For two years I doctored my cough, which cost me many dollars, but still I seemed to get worse. My cough was so bad I could not sleep."

NEWMAN BROS. PIANOS

Ideal For the Home

Without doubt American men and women look upon their homes as deserving, above all else, of their best efforts in purchasing, and every purchase undergoes the most careful scrutiny and investigation of values. Each article is chosen not only for qualities that will wear well, but for artistic excellence, to make it satisfactory for long years to come.

This is preeminently true in the purchase of a piano. It is not sufficient that it be durable and of suitable design. It must have correct tone and a beauty that is satisfying.

Beauty of tone, combined with durability and artistic design and finish have made the Newman Bros. Pianos ideal instruments for the home.

Office open Saturdays only.

Holme's

THE STORE FOR YOU.

Snapshot of James R. Keene as he was leaving the New York Stock Exchange.

New York, N. Y.—James R. Keene has been unusually successful on the exchange and it has just been brought out during the past week why some shrewd speculators win while others lose.

It was while giving testimony before United States Commissioner Alexander in the federal building over the Columbus and Rocking Coal and Iron company's pool. It seems it is just a matter of knowing when to go out that made the difference between utter failure for the last pool and several hundred thousand dollars profit for James R. Keene. And he claims he did not work in any underground manner either. It appears that the pool engineered by Keene succeeded in forcing the price up to about sixty dollars a share, and that was where James R. Keene thought best to leave it. The other members of the pool, however, thought they knew more than he and formed a second pool, which has been the source of much loss and much scandal on the New York exchange.

ANNUAL MEETING OF COUNTY'S FARMERS

Session Held at Milton Junction Accomplished Much in Line of Talks and Resolutions.

The twenty-sixth annual farmers' convention held under the auspices of the Rock County Farmers' Grange was opened at 10 o'clock at Milton Junction Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock with A. C. Powers of Beloit in the chair.

After a vocal duet by Mrs. Theron Rice and Miss Blanche Rice, and invocation by Rev. M. A. Drew of Milton the chairman introduced H. L. Skavlen, commissioner of county highways, who in a strong address set forth the benefits derived from county highways.

The afternoon session was opened with music by Misses Beth and Ruth Bingham, who although young in years proved themselves old in music. This was followed by W. O. Hatchelder of Madison, chief of the highway division, with a forcible and interesting address on the utility of state aid in the construction of country highways. His address, as well as that of Mr. Skavlen, brought out a spirited discussion, and while the audience were evidently quite evenly divided, in the opinion of either system were in the minority they made up in energy what they lacked in numbers.

A pleasing recitation by Charles Vincent, and a song by Mrs. Rice were followed by an able talk by Geo. F. Kellogg of Lake Mills on fruit culture in Wisconsin, and his visit to the National Apple Growers' convention at Spokane, Washington. While fruit culture is not a popular topic in this county, yet Mr. Kellogg told numerous cases showing that where orchards were properly cared for had been a paying investment to their owners.

The evening session was given over to educational matters and was called to order by County Superintendent of Schools O. D. Antidot, and was opened with a recitation by Miss Nan L. Brown of Milton.

K. L. Patch, secretary of agriculture extension, College of Agriculture, Madison, was then introduced and gave an interesting and profitable lecture on agricultural education and the benefits of a county agricultural school, of which he said Wisconsin now had five with four more contemplated. His lecture was interspersed with stereopticon views showing the work of the students in these schools.

A piano solo by Miss Edna Jewett was followed by a recitation by Geo. W. Ives of Milton College, who responded to an encore which brought down the house. A soprano solo by Miss Viola Brown was well received, after which the next topic, "How to Make the Country School Efficient," was ably presented by W. E. Larson, Madison, inspector of rural schools. Mr. Larson said that the rural school had made rapid advancement in the last decade, but needed very many improvements to comply with twentieth century conditions and pointed out where improvements should be made.

When Chairman Powers called the convention to order at 9:30 Thursday morning he faced a picked house, who notwithstanding the cold morning were early in their seats. After a piano duet by Mrs. W. E. Rodgers and Mrs. J. P. Whitford of Milton and the Rev. A. J. C. Bond of Milton, James J. D. Clarke of Milton was introduced and presented his topic, "The Better Cow." Mr. Clarke emphasized the need of careful breeding and the necessity of selecting some of the dairy types if you would be successful as a dairy farmer, thus admitting that all the good qualities were not confined to any one breed, yet his contention was that the Jersey cow embodied more good points than the others. Mr. Clarke is an encyclopedist on his topic, showing from start to finish that he had his subject well in hand.

The next number, a recitation by Miss Adele Morrillfield, was followed by Thos. Convey of Ridgeway, whose topic, "Silos and Silage," was ably handled. He said it not only furnishes a succulent food which is a prime necessity in the feeding of the dairy cow, but from an economical standpoint it was by far the cheapest way to put up a part of the corn crop.

After a piano duet by Mesdames Rogers and Whitford, who responded to an encore, the next subject, "Assessment and Taxation," by P. P. Starr, county supervisor of assessment, who presented facts and figures to show the great improvement that had been brought about under the superior system, over that of the old haphazard assessment so long in vogue in the county.

The afternoon session was called to order promptly at 1:30 and was opened with a piano duet by Mrs. Rogers and Mrs. Whitford.

The next topic, "Domestic Science, Productive of Better Health, Better Homes and Better Schools," by Mrs. Ada M. Johns of Rockford, Illinois, was in every respect a most able paper, a plan to mothers asking that their daughters be instructed in the art of house-making and pointed many object lessons showing that a lack of these instructions was a blight upon all too many homes.

A solo by Mrs. Whitford, a recitation by Miss Belle Cartwright and a trombone solo by H. C. Sullivan were each pleasing numbers.

The Hon. Oliver Wilson, Peoria, Ill., lecturer of the National Grange, was then introduced and took for his subject, "The Need of Organization for the American Farmer." This was Mr. Wilson's first appearance before a Rock county audience; but he captured his hearers at the onset and held them in rapt attention to the close of his address. While his arguments were in the interest of the farmer, they were wholly impassioned, adding for nothing, as he termed it, but the "Square Deal." The general sentiment expressed by all was that for sound logic it was one of the strongest speeches ever delivered here in the interest of the organization.

"Listen to Him."

"Father's trip abroad did him so much good," said the self-made man's daughter. "He looks better, feels better, and as for appetite—honestly, it would do your heart good to hear him eat!"—Everybody's.

PRETTY NUPTIALS AT COUNTRY HOME

Miss Etta Hubbard Wedded to Delbert C. Smith Tuesday Afternoon at Her Mother's Home.

(Special to the Gazette.)

Evansville, Ind., Feb. 22.—A pretty wedding took place at two-thirty o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the farm home of Mrs. Evelyn Hubbard, when her only daughter, Miss Etta, became the bride of Mr. Delbert C. Smith, son of Mr. Robert Smith of Brooklyn. The bridal party stood beneath a white canopy which was festooned with smilax and banded with greens and carnations while the Rev. J. C. Loew performed the ceremony. The bride was given away by her uncle, Ephraim Hubbard, and the impressive Episcopal ring service was read in the presence of about seventy-five guests, all of whom were relatives or very close friends. Miss Anna Smith, sister of the groom, served the bride as maid of honor, and Mr. Robert Hubbard attended the groom. The bride was gown in a pretty creation of white lawn and maitrease lace and carried a prayer book, while the maid of honor wore a dainty dress of shell pink tulle. At the conclusion of the ceremony a wedding luncheon was served. Both young people are well known and highly esteemed here, the bride having graduated with the class of 1909 from the Evansville high school and also from the Connock School of Oratory at Northwestern university, four years later, while the groom has for some time been a member of the Evansville military band. Mr. and Mrs. Smith will be at home on the Robert Smith farm near Brooklyn. The guests present from a distance included Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hubbard and children, Joe Hubbard and family of Beloit; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hubbard and children, Miss Elva Smith and Lawrence Smith of Ft. Atkinson; Lester M. Holt and family of Washington, D. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Crandall and Mrs. H. H. Moen of Edgerton; Mrs. Frank Condon and daughters of Hampton, Conn.; Walter Holt of Birney, Montana; Clayton and Clarence Hubbard of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Roland Morrison of Milwaukee; Mrs. Sarah Holt and daughters, the Misses Emma and Mary, and son, Henry, and Mr. and Mrs. Bert Glidden of Brooklyn, Wis.

Mrs. Amanda Allen died at her home a short distance from this city at eight-fifteen o'clock last evening after an illness of three weeks' duration. Her maiden name was Amanda Powell and she was born Oct. 14, 1832 in Cuba, N. Y. On September 20, 1853 she was married to Asaph Allen and in 1854 they came to Exeter, Wis., and remained there until 1863 when they moved to a farm near Evansville where she has resided continuously for the past forty-five years. Her death was due to heart trouble and a general breaking down. She leaves a daughter, Mrs. Rose Lamb, of Madison, and a son, Ethna Allen, who lives on the old homestead, her husband having preceded her to the home beyond about eight months ago. In the passing of Mrs. Allen the community loses a good woman and a kind neighbor, and her children a loving and devoted mother. The funeral will be held from the home on Thursday afternoon at one-thirty o'clock, Rev. T. W. North officiating.

Other News Items.
The mail carriers and their wives and the postoffice clerks were the guests of Miss Martha Andrews at an enjoyable dinner party given at her home at one o'clock today. Wilder, and Fred Winston.

will the sale be handled absolutely without loss to you?

That's the one question that has caused storekeepers so much worry and money in answering. Thousands of merchants say "Yes, absolutely sure," because they are using National Cash Registers.

With a National Cash Register in your store, you know, no matter where you are, that you have a perfect mechanical record in the register, under lock and key, of every penny's worth of goods sold from your shelves, whether the purchase be cash, charge, C. O. D., goods carried or delivered.

That's a strong statement. Think what it means to you—all the profit on all the goods that leave your store.

We can prove this. You will be convinced when you understand how it's done.

TOO MUCH BLUSTER

There has been too much bluster
on the part of the enemies of the present administration as to the evils that exist in Washington. Like the muck-raking articles that appeared in the magazines and certain sensational yellow journals, a few years ago, they have passed the limit of human patience.

It is easy enough to say that everything is going to the bow-wow, but to substantiate this broad statement is most hard. Recently a newspaper seeking reputation made a so-called canvass of Congressman Cannon's congressional district, a newspaper canvass,
and then announced delightedly
that the editors repudiated him; that the newspapers voiced the sentiment of the district.

Within a week a thorough canvass of the district was made and some of the same newspapers that had apparently repudiated Cannon endorsed him. Which canvass was correct? An exchange, in commenting upon this strange reversal of opinion, says:

"A newspaper poll is of all methods of testing public sentiment usually the most unreliable. The people who are in harmony with the attitude of the paper making the canvass are reasonably certain to sound in their views.
Those in opposition are reasonably certain to fall to respond. The result is, therefore, that in the case of one who, peering outdoors through a window at night, sees the reflection of his own features."

More recently still it is pointedly intimated that certain reports sent out from Washington lately, with reference to the Ballinger-Pinchot investigation, have left an erroneous impression in the public mind regarding the attitude of the secretary of the interior toward the inquiry. Especially, it is claimed, was this the case
when the dispatches made it appear that Mr. Ballinger had persistently placed obstacles in the way of a free and full investigation, by withholding from the committee certain documents in his possession which the counsel for Mr. Glavis had asked for, and which the chairman of the committee agreed that he should have access to.

It now appears that Secretary Ballinger, on receipt of the committee's request for those documents, wrote the chairman informing him of the fact that some of the papers called for contained information the publication of which would jeopardize the government's cases against the Can-ningham and other Alaska coal claimants, but proposing that they be submitted to the attorneys of Messrs. Pin-chot and Glavis and to his own (Mr. Ballinger's) attorney, that all might have full knowledge of their contents, "but that they might mutually agree on the temporary elimination from the record of those parts which would aid
the opponents of the government."

There has really been nothing unusual about the matter in any of its details. The precautions taken are those which any careful lawyer would observe in behalf of his client. Even to withhold himself from suspicion, Mr.
Ballinger would not be justified in jeopardizing the interests of his client,
the government.

It is quite proper that he should be not right in this matter. He has repeatedly declared that he would not be content with anything less than a thorough investigation into his official conduct both as land commissioner and secretary. His acts so far seem to have been consistent with these declarations.

THE INNER WHEELS

Wheels within wheels are now at work in the republican party. New alignments, new combinations, new complications, are arising each day and the much-disturbed radical element of the Wisconsin branch of the C. O. P. is still at sea over what will be the outcome of all this maneuvering for position, this jockeying for place that is going on even before the starter's gun is loaded. Thus far those who are opposed to the regime
of Senator La Follette have been unable to decide on any man to oppose him or any combination of men to contest the fight for state offices. The reform element and the erstwhile reformers are all at sea. Perhaps the opponents to the radicals are as much at sea as are the radicals and in far worse shape as they distrust each other.
Apparently all that was gained by the opposition to La Follette two years ago has been lost through dis-organization. What the conservative element need now is a new deal; a new set of men, good, clean, honest, reliable, progressive businessmen who are free from all entanglements to come to the front and lead the republican party out of the wilderness of reform that means nothing but self-elevation and political revenge; men
that can stand on their own records and give the state a government for the people and not by the people and not for the bosses and by the bosses.

IN ONE YEAR

On Washington's birthday, 1909, the Gazette Publishing Company moved from its old home on North Main street, where it had been located for nearly forty years, to its present quarters at Milwaukee and Bluff streets.
During the years many changes have been made in the plant and on its anniversary moving day the Gazette
found itself better equipped to handle
both news and printing matter better than ever before. Connected with the outside news world by the Associated Press wires that reach every civilized country it is able to give the latest news each day. A complete state service from all parts of the state, with special correspondents in Milwaukee, Madison and Beloit, added to the county service, which includes reports from Edgerton, Evansville, Milton, Milton Junction, Orfordville, Brookfield and Monroe and every town in the county, give to the readers the news of the nearby communities.
Equipped with typesets of the latest models, presses capable of handling the finest kind of printing matter, a news room capable of handling advertisements of the most approved style and with a printing department that can turn out as fine work as any of the large city offices the Gazette stands ready to greet all friends, old or new.

WHAT TO EXPECT

Each spring there comes the cry
for a better and more representative council. There is much speculation as to who will make suitable candidates for the city offices and then the matter is left dormant until after election day and the members are elected. The Gazette has no axes to grind and will after the primaries remain neutral. It is up to the people to decide whom they wish to represent them and they should make up their minds early enough so that there will be no grumbling and regrets later on.

In New York city Tammany is beginning to feel the effects of the lean years that are to come without the aid of the public funds to keep its members at work. New York has been looted so long by this powerful organization that the change must come as a surprise to its citizens to know that they will receive at least a partial return for their money expended.

Philadelphia is enjoying a street-car strike that bids fair to be more than interesting before it is ended. Yesterday witnessed city troops deprived of their guns, equipment and even uniforms by the mob that fought for triumphs of the attempt of the city to govern them with bayonets.

Many politicians would like to know just what is going to happen
this coming summer. Talks of conferences held in Chicago have a very disappointing effect upon the minds of many of the aspirants for office whose lightning rods have been set for some time past.

Yardman of Mississippi has lost out in his fight for the United States Senatorship and the Senate will not witness the gyrations of this southern firebrand at the coming session—at least.

Chicago is just now having another crusade against the red-light district which bids fair to strike terror into the hearts of the bravest of the law-defenders. It may even result in driving many of the most notorious into exile, at least for a time.

It is to be expected that Milwaukee will sit up and take notice now that it has a champion lightweight resident. Besides being famous for being a beer city it now has the added honor of being the home of Wolcott.

Good roads appear to be a drug on the market just at present, but perhaps when spring comes the value of the work for the past few years will be demonstrated.

One of the first blows against the schools in Rock county was struck yesterday when a deputy sheriff raided a hotel near the new yards and arrested the proprietor, charging him

with selling liquor without a license.

There promises to be some more fun when the appropriation for harbors and rivers comes to the front in the Senate. There are some who do not believe in expending so much money on river navigation and some
that do.

The English cabinet does not know just yet what is going to happen, but they will very soon if they try to pin
any faith in the promises of the Irish contingent who now hold the whip-hand.

Europe is ready to greet former President Roosevelt like a hero. Well, there are a lot of people in this United States that would be glad to have a part in a similar welcome when he reaches home.

Taft told his audience yesterday
that he was not sure whether George Washington had a sense of humor or not. However, he made no intimation that he was not a great man.

Some ambitious surgeon is going to exhibit a hoodwink to show the public that there is such a thing after all.

Heart to Heart Talks.

TO A PLAIN GIRL.

Do not be concerned because of your lack of good looks.

If you should worry about anything in connection with yourself let it be because of your lack of goodness or of patience or of sweetness in disposition.

Outside appearances count?
Certainly, in a way. A man admires a pretty face or figure as he admires a pretty picture, but it does not follow that he will marry a pretty face for itself any more than he would marry
a pretty picture.

Men want substantial rather than ornamental qualities in a wife.

Look about you.
Note how many husbands have selected wives with plain features.
These men were looking for soul qualities—the lasting qualities—of womanhood.

Beauty is rare.
And it may cover a multitude of failings. The handsome woman may have great poverty of spirit, a scornful disposition or a cold heart. She may lack the essence of real charm and fail to give promise of happy comradeship in marriage.

Men know this.
Rare exceptions aside, you may depend upon it that the man who falls in love with a pretty woman loves her for something more than her beauty.

Admiration is not love.
More fascination does not last.
If you are loved by a true man—and no other is worth while—it is because of the things that abide—true womanliness, nobleness of mind, helpfulness
of spirit, tenderness, sympathy.

That is what men want.
Never mind about your plainness.
Some good man will come to know
you for your true self, and if he finds in you sweetness of soul, beauty of spirit, he will idealize those plain features of yours into a thing of beauty
which shall be a joy forever.

Yes, men like beauty.
But they care more for charm of soul, congenial ways. The girl who is good and winsome has a great advantage over the mere beauty who may be vain or frivolous or cold and selfish.

Make yourself attractive, but—Above all things, cultivate a sweet spirit. Show appreciation of others.
Be gracious. And some day your lover
will seek and win you and find a prize.

(Copyright, 1909, by George Mat-

Comes a message from abroad, saying that A. Hamid dwells peacefully, and tills the soil in the rocky rural dells. Dreading night of treason
now, fearing neither gun nor knife, with
"retirement" nor "crown" upon his brow, happiness has filled his life; but when all the world's
at rest, and the bees have sought

their hives, Abdul looks into the West,
gazing for nine hundred wives.
Through the long and busy day, Abdul does his rustic chores, bearing sheaves of shining hay, chasing pigs
around out doors; cleaning horses' tails and legs, making sausage by the link, gathering the precious eggs, teaching silly calves to drink; but the gloaming brings him rest, and he then no longer strives; Abdul faces toward the West, yearning for nine hundred wives. Ah, the gods that watch above, know the aching hearts of men; know how strong the voice of love calls, and calls, and calls again. For a time we may forget, in the moonlight's glow
and glare, when in harvest fields we await,
when we bend beneath loads of corn;
but when evening stars swing low,
love shall dominate our lives; Abdul paces to and fro, longing for nine hundred wives.

Commander John S. Croghan of the U. S. Navy, U. S. Navy, U. S. Navy, Chicago, Ill.—All hope has been given up by the family of Commander Croghan of ever again seeing him alive. The case of this dashing young commander is most unfortunate for he leaves a young wife and a sixteen-month-old babe to mourn his loss. A cousin of his, Mr. A. J. Hawkins, living at 7125 Perry avenue, voiced the sentiments of his parents and two brothers and sisters, all of whom are grief-stricken over the apparent fate
of their relative.

"A week ago last Monday," he related, "I received a letter from Mrs.
Croghan, enclosed in which was a picture of her little son, Alvin, aged 16 months. She spoke of being happy, because this was practically the last
sea trip that 'Johnny' her husband, would have to make for a year, as he was to be transferred to shore duty at the Brooklyn navy yard and he would be able to be at home so much hereafter and play with baby. She told of receiving a letter from her husband before his departure from New-York, where the Nina had towed two boats from the Brooklyn navy yard.
The message said that the commander
would arrive at his home in Malden,

Monday, Feb. 14, 1910, and was signed

Every Knock Is a Boost

A man came in from an adjoining city yesterday and said: "I decided to come to Janesville to have my work done. And my dentist there told me not to come to Dr. Richards."

"It seems that his dentist, who he knew nothing of my work or of me, was prejudiced against me because I advertised. In times past, when the darkness of pardonable ignorance blinded the eyes of the professional man to the fact that the people wanted to be told through the papers about what could be done for them, professional men did not advertise. Today, to my way of thinking, a false pride (which has been handed down by tradition through the years) keeps good men from telling the people about their good work and about the ways and means they have of serving them and saving pain and trouble."

Of course I did not work for the visiting man, because he resolved to see why the other dentist "knocked" him. In fact, the patient saved seven dollars and got a difficult piece of work done to his entire satisfaction by coming to talk the matter over with me.

SUB-ZERO WEATHER HOLDS UP TRAINS*Rockford Schedules Deranged on Both Lines—Several Through Trains Were Hours Late.

Sub-zero weather last night and this morning rearranged railroad schedules, not however, to the satisfaction of either employees or patrons of the road. Through trains on both roads were more or less late, those from the north on the C. & N. W. Ry. suffering the most delay.

On the C. M. & St. P. Ry. those trains made up in this city left on time, but trains from the north and south were from twenty minutes to three quarters of an hour late. C. & N. W. trains from the north were far behind schedule, especially 514 and 512, which were six and a half and five hours late, respectively. Trains 502, 504 and 510 were about an hour and a half behind while 501 was delayed two hours and a quarter.

South bound trains on the North-western from Chicago early last night were all nearly on time with the exception of train 503, due to arrive here at 11:05 p. m., which did not pull in until 1:05 a. m. Train 507, due here this morning at 5:50, did not arrive until 7:45.

MEDICAL MEN HAVE CAST THE DIE NOW

Pass Resolutions Against Contract Lodge Practice at Last Night's Session.

The Rock County Medical association held a meeting last evening in Dr. Pender's office in this city, about thirty members of the association attending. The principal discussion was on the question of contract lodge practice and a resolution was adopted forbidding the members of the association to continue such work. Those of the fraternity who were not present last evening will also be notified not to take up the practice or to discontinue it and a sixty days' notice will be given them in which to comply with the rules of the society. The matter has been freely discussed at several meetings and would have been settled earlier but that the resolution was not in exactly the desired form.

Several members of the association state that they believe that a discrimination has been shown in the resolution as only lodge practice is aimed at and it is known that many members of the association have private contracts with corporations, with railroads, with both, and city and county. The resolution will probably be enforced as there are strong chances which the members bind themselves to if they violate them and regarding consultation with physicians who continue to conduct a contract lodge practice.

Dr. Loomis was the chairman of the evening's meeting and Dr. Fox gave a paper on "Artificial Chlorosis." Dr. Nuzum followed with a paper on "Prognosis and Treatment." This was followed by an open discussion in which Drs. Pender and Dwight of Janesville and Dr. Bennett of Beloit took part.

Is Installing Modern Register.

A. M. Lockard of Madison, Here This Week Posing Electric Cash Register in Gazette.

A. M. Lockard of Madison, agent for the National Cash Register Co., is in the city this week installing one of the latest model multiple calculators, electrically operated cash registers for The Gazette. This machine records all cash sales, all paid out items, all items received on account, in fact gives an itemized record of all transactions and issues a card with each item. This is the fourth electrically operated machine of the National make which Mr. Lockard has installed in this city and its operation and capacity for time saving are little short of wonderful.

It is one of the modern methods of accuracy which the strain of present business procedure demands and its work in cutting out errors and in saving time in handling cash items is such as to make it of great value.

Mr. Lockard has disposed of a great number of cash registers in this city and surrounding territory and the factory which produces the machine is taxed to its utmost in taking care of the requirements of the business people of the United States.

Mr. Lockard has his headquarters at the Myers Hotel this week, where he has a display of sample machines so that those interested may inspect the workings of the various models.

CARDINALS TO MEET STURDY OPPONENTS*Rockford "Alumni" Basketball Team Which Plays Locals Tonight Is in Clash by Itself.

The best game of the season thus far and one which will put their ability to a test will be played this evening at the West Side rink building by the "Cardinals" basketball team. Their opponents will be the "Alumni" five of Rockford, the only city team in the Forest City and strongest of all basketball aggregations there. A number of the Rockford men have played against the Y. M. C. A. team of this city and the "Alumni" of those who have seen them is that they are A-1 basket ballers. Their center, Redsell, with the Rockford high school squad for three years and is a speedy player. He is only six feet and two inches in height and can reach the basket easily by stretching a little. Osborne, one of the guards, played with the Beloit college football team last year as quarterback. Blidebrand and Tubbsman, forwards, are other stars with the squad and have taken part in games in this city. The Janesville lineup will be the same as in previous contests: Bennett, center; Cunningham and Robertson, forwards; Langdon, Beers and Booth, guards.

THE PLEBELIANS

By TEMPLE BAILEY

Copyright 1909, by Benj. B. Hampton.

THE little dog's tail was tucked in tightly between his legs, and he shivered and shook as the wind blew the snow against his hollow sides.

The little man, buttoned up to his ears in a fur coat, had no hollows. He was round and fat and rolled when he walked.

"Hello!" he said, as he stumbled over the dog. He stopped and peered through his eyeglasses. "Where did you come from?"

The dog raised a hopeful ear and whined.

"Horton," called Billy Bates from the big blue motor-car at the curb, "get a move on; I'm freezing."

Burton ran down the steps and came up to the machine, puffing. "I thought maybe I'd have my mantle take that dog in."

"Don't do it," Billy advised. "He ought to be in the pound. He's just a common cur."

Burton climbed in. "Well, I'd like to have a dog," he said, as they started off.

"Get a good one, then," Billy admonished. "We might go up to the kennel show now and look them over."

"All right," Burton agreed. But as they whizzed away, his eyes went back to the little creature crouched in his doorway, seeking shelter from the cutting blasts.

"What you want," Billy explained, "is a good city dog. A bull terrier, I should say. One of the fellows has a dachshund—brought him over, you know, and paid for him by the yard, and another has a French poodle and ties his hair in front with a red bow, but those are eccentricities. And fox terriers are too lady-like, and hunting dogs are for the country. If you want a dog that is perfectly good form, I should say a bull terrier."

"Could I keep a bull terrier in my rooms?" Burton asked.

"You've heard of a bull in a china shop," remarked Billy facetiously, "and this couldn't be worse."

Burton laughed. He always laughed at his friend's feeble jokes. It was one of the easiest ways of paying his debt of gratitude. For Billy had made possible Burton's break into society, and the friendship of the two men was based on Billy's social easiness and on Burton's willingness to pay all bills.

It was Billy who chose the irreproachable bachelor apartments where Burton lived in lonely state; it was Billy who furnished the buffet and the valet; it was Billy who coached Burton in the ethics of up-to-date gastronomy; and it was Billy who shared in all of these benefits, gratis. Hence it was on the cards that, under Billy's chaperonage, Burton should buy his dog!

At the door of the Kennel Club they met Marcia Wells and her mother.

Marcia had an abundance of red-gold hair. She wore a smart gray walking suit, a trim gray hat, and the violet and blue Burton had sent her. And she was a joy forever!

She was taller than Burton and as he walked beside her he was ill at ease. There were other reasons than his size for uneasiness, however. Marcia's ancestors had come over in the Mayflower, and she bore the stamp of her new world aristocracy in her confident air, her security, her detachment from what she called the common herd.

Burton's ancestry was a thing of shreds and tatters. There had been a Burton in the Civil War, back of that he dared not go. The soldier had served with some honor, but he had signed his name with a cross mark. The Burtons following had been dead poor and dead ignorant, until this one son, with shrewdness and good luck, had struggled into a fortune.

"I love dogs," said Marcia Wells, as they stopped in front of an engaging bunch of St. Bernard puppies. "Down at Wellsboro we have fifteen, and when I start out for a ride, they almost tear me to pieces."

"I had a dog once," Burton told her eagerly. "It was the nicest dog, and when it died I cried like everything. I was a little fellow, you know."

"What kind of dog was it?" Marcia asked, pulling the ears of a pointer who had made overtures as she passed.

"Oh, I don't know," Burton stammered. "Just dog, I guess."

"Really?" Marcia murmured, and added, "It doesn't pay to keep anything but blooded dogs."

"Well, my little dog was pretty nice," Burton insisted, and then wilted at Marcia's indifferent "Really?"

Billy Bates, who with Mrs. Wells, had forged ahead, came back now, with the information, "Here's a dog for you, Burton." He guided them to a box where a bull terrier, with a blue ribbon in his collar, stood looking out upon the yelping, barking, whining world, with the calm glance of a thoroughbred.

"There!" Billy said, and fell back that Burton might look. "He has a pedigree as long as your arm, all his points are perfect, and he's for sale. It's the chance of a lifetime."

"Oh, you beauty!" Marcia cried. Her indifference was gone, her eyes sparkled. "You beauty?"

But Burton was not enthusiastic. There was something repellent in the smug self-confidence of that short-nosed dog. It was bad enough to have friends who looked down on you, and a valet who condescended to you, but to be burdened with a dog whose pedigree was longer than your own would be unbearable.

He tried to bluff it out. "Oh, I don't know," he said. "I'm afraid I shouldn't want him in my rooms."

"I should want him anywhere," Marcia told him. "He's a ducky dog, Mr. Burton. You would love him in a week."

But Burton knew he wouldn't love him. He knew that the smug little dog would keep him at a distance, and he would be out in the cold as he had always been with Billy's friends, and even with Billy.

"Oh, I don't know," he hesitated again.

Marcia leaned over and took the dog's black muzzle in her gloved hand.

"Did fellow," she said softly, and looked deep into his eyes, and his tail began to wag slowly, and his lips wrinkled back from his teeth in a grin of naughtiness.

As they stood there together, the girl and the dog, Burton felt that they were two of a kind in the back of them both was profound anxiety, and in both of them ran patriotic blood. He was seized with an inspiration.

"Let me get him for you, Miss Marcia," he said. "He won't look at me after seeing you."

"Oh, no," Marcia refused quickly; but her mother intervened. "It is very kind of Mr. Burton, dear, and we can take him down to Wellsboro with us next week."

The brightness had all died out of Marcia's face, and her perfunctory thanks chilled the little fires of Burton's hopes.

But for every baughty withdrawal of her daughter, Mrs. Wells always made compensating advances, and now, as the tug that made him the property of Miss Marcia Wells of Wellsboro, was tied about the neck of the smug little dog, Burton's drooping spirits were revived by the mother's careful, "You have done so much for Marcia. You mustn't mind if she is a bit overpowered."

"Now, she shouldn't feel this way," little Burton protested. "I like to do things for her, Mrs. Wells. She is a beautiful girl." And Mrs. Wells said, "We think so."

And then Burton bore them off radiantly to lunch, and they ate in a great golden-bright dining-room, and Burton ordered the grape fruit and the lobster Newburg and the chiffonade salad and the dainty wines, and tried to enter into the gossip of the elect.

But Billy and Marcia talked only to each other; Marcia, composed outwardly, but glowing with some inner fire that lighted her eyes and tinged her cheeks with pink; Billy, expressing by every intonation of his lowered voice his adoration.

And in the face of their preoccupation, Burton grew more and more despondent as the courses progressed, until Mrs. Wells made a remark that sent the blood singing to his heart:

"We want you to come to Wellsboro for Christmas week, Marcia and I. Billy will be there, and a lot of young people, and we expect to have some good times."

Burton's responsiveness following the invitation was a thing that made Billy stare.

"We will see you soon," the little man said, as late that afternoon he put them down at their own door. "And I hope when I get to Wellsboro you will have a welcome for me."

"Indeed we shall," said Marcia's mother, but it was at Marcia that Burton looked. And Marcia's eyes were on Billy—the tender eyes of a loving woman. And in that moment the little fires of hope in Burton's bosom died out forever.

"Billy," he said slowly, as they chugged away through the falling snow—"Billy, it will be a lucky man that gets Marcia Wells."

"Oh, shut up," Billy growled.

Burton stared at him. "What's the matter?"

"Well, don't I know the fellow will be lucky?" Billy stormed. "But that doesn't make it any easier for me."

"But she loves you—," steadily.

Billy turned on him. "What difference does that make?" he flung out bitterly. "I adore her, and she can't marry me."

"Why not?"

"We are both dead poor," Billy said. "Wellsboro is mortgaged up to the limit. She has not to marry a rich man. It doesn't make any difference if he is as common as dishwater. He's got to be rich."

Burton felt the cold strike deep within him. He knew now why he was invited to Wellsboro. He knew why Billy's tone was so bitter. He knew why Marcia avoided him, and why her mother had been so gracious. He was "as common as dishwater," and they all knew it. But they wanted his money! On through the storm went the big machine, rounding the drift-heaped corners silently, speeding through the snowy streets, with the great lantern flaring in the twilight.

"If I loved a girl," Burton said at last out of the stillness, "I'd marry her if I was as poor as Job's turkey. I'd marry her if I loved her."

Billy turned and looked at the fat little figure beside him. "Oh, you!" he said contemptuously.

Burton's head went up. "I may not be in your class, Bates," he said, "but if I loved her and she cared, I'd marry her if I had to run away with her. But if she didn't care—she might beg me on her knees. She couldn't marry me for what I have."

"Well," Billy's laugh was hateful. "If you wait until a girl cares for you, you'll wait a long time, Burton."

It was a dauntless thing to say, but Billy was disgruntled, and Burton knew it was true. He knew that, except for his money, he could not have touched the outer rim of the circle in which Marcia and Billy moved. He was an alien, an outsider, a Pariah!

The automobile drew up to the curb in front of the big apartment house in which Burton lived. The little man got out and Billy started to follow.

"No," Burton said, and Billy stopped and stared. "No, I don't want you to come in to-night. My man will take you home. I know you were upset and all that, but I can't quite get over what you said to me just now. And I am not quite sure that I shall ever get over it, Billy."

He was just a little puffy, red-faced plebeian, all bundled up in a fur coat, and with his breath coming short, but in that moment Billy knew that his hold upon the little man was gone. He had killed the goose with the golden egg.

As Burton went slowly up the steps, the door opened, letting out a flood of yellow light. There was a yell, and something soft was hurled against his legs.

"What is it?" he asked, bending over.

"I kicked him out, sir," the elevator boy explained from the doorway. "It's a stray dog. He's been about here all day, sir."

"Well, you are a nice brute!" Burton commented as he picked the moaning creature out of the snow, and with the cur in his arms he entered the elevator.

The boy carried him up, and landed him on the fourth floor with the warning, "You'd better let him alone, sir. He's a common cur."

"Hump!" was all the answer that Burton vouchsafed, and when he had let himself into his room he dropped the trembling little creature on the rug.

"So they kicked you out, did they?" he asked. "Well, you're not the only one, puppie."

A half-hour later as the dog, washed and fed, lay luxuriously in front of the fire, Burton said again, "So they kicked you out? Well, I know how it feels."

Over the fireplace was a Burne-Jones head of a girl. It was the one thing in the room that Burton had selected. All the other elegances were the result of Billy's taste. But that one picture Burton had chosen because it reminded him of Marcia.

"Yes, I know how it feels," he repeated slowly, and suddenly as he sat there looking at the beautiful drooping head, he caught his breath in a sob, and his own head went down on his arm, and the room was very still.

The little dog staggered up on his weak legs, and cast an inquiring eye upon the huddled up figure. Then he put a paw on Burton's knee and whined.

Burton raised his head and looked straight into the anxious brown eyes.

"Oh, look here," he said unsteadily, "you know how it feels. You're ugly, and common, and nobody wants you."

The other paw was laid on his hand as the little brute gave sympathetic attention.

"Say, let's get out," Burton continued. "You don't fit in here, and I don't. My man's out to-night, thank the Lord, or he'd make no end of a row about you. There's an old aunt of mine up in the country, and she's as poor as I used to be, and she's got a little farm. I'm going to make it a big farm before I get through, and out there I can be the big frog in the middle, and we'll tramp around the country, and there'll be people I can talk to and not feel they're looking down on me."

The little dog, hesitating, crawled into his lap. With the rough head tucked under his chin, Burton had a sudden comforting sense of companionship. There was no smug, self-satisfied aristocrat, but a friend who loved him.

"You're pretty nice," he whispered. "I guess we're two of a kind."

His voice broke. And for a long time they sat there together, the little common dog and the little common man, seeing visions of the freedom of God's country and the life of their kind.

CANADIAN FORESTRY CONVENTION MEETS

Representatives of Nearly All of Provinces Gathered at Fredericton, N. B., This Morning. (Special to the Gazette.)

Fredericton, N. B., Feb. 23.—Of more than usual interest, because of its representative character, is the eleventh annual convention of the Canadian Forestry Association, which began a two days' session here today. The purposes of the gathering, as outlined in the opening addresses of the speakers, are to establish a broader understanding of the forest and its relation to the great industries depending on it, to advance the conservative use of the forest resources for both the present and future need of these industries, and to stimulate and unite all efforts to perpetuate the forest as a permanent resource of the nation.

Representatives of nearly all of the provinces filled the legislative assembly chamber at 10 o'clock this morning when the gathering was called to order by the association president, Thomas Southworth, formerly Superintendent of Forestry for Ontario. The visitors were cordially welcomed by Lieutenant Governor Tweedie, Premier Hazen, Surveyor General, Gilmour and other official representatives of the Province of New Brunswick and the City of Fredericton.

The list of speakers prepared for the two days' session contains the names of many men of wide prominence. Included among the number are Hon. Clifford Sifton of Ottawa, chairman of the Commission of Conservation; Hon. Jules Allard, Minister of Crown Lands for Quebec; Chancellor C. C. Jones and Prof. Miller of the University of New Brunswick; Prof. E. J. Zavitz of Ontario Agricultural College; Dr. W. C. J. Hall, superintendent of the Bureau of Forestry of Quebec; W. H. Brown, secretary of the Forestry Commission of New Hampshire; and Dr. H. H. Fernow, who was for many years Chief Forester of the United States.

Doctor—"Ah, I am sorry to hear it; that is a complaint I am unable to cure."

CAUSES DEBILITY

Here are Facts Backed Up by a Strong Guarantee.

Catarrh causes debility. In our opinion, most people suffering from general debility have catarrh. Such cases of debility cannot be completely cured by medicine not designed to eradicate catarrh. In every case where one remedy fails to give one the satisfaction we will not charge a cent for the medicine employed during the trial. Now, surely no one should hesitate to believe us or to put our claim to a practical test under such conditions. We will take all the risk; no one else can lose anything by the transaction.

We make these statements and this offer because we know and have time and again proved that. Rexall Mucin-Tone rarely fails to do as we claim. It is not a cure-all prescribed to cure every disease that flesh is heir to. It is intended for one purpose, i. e., to cure catarrh by assailing the diseased condition in a reasonable, scientific way, which is to regulate the action of the glands to have the tonic and alterative power to correct faulty metabolism (tissue change) and to stimulate and help overcome the cause or causes of catarrh. This being done, appetite increases, nutrition improves, weight is gained, comfort of body is attained and life's work taken up with the zest natural to the perfectly healthy individual.

We want you to try Rexall Mucin-Tone. Follow directions and take it regularly and consistently for a reasonable length of time. Then, if you are not satisfied, come back and tell us and the money you paid for the treatment will be returned without any argument whatsoever.

Rexall Mucin-Tone comes in two sizes, 50c and $1.00 a bottle. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store, The Smith Drug Co.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

"A woman who does not please is a false note in the harmonies of nature."

—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

"TO ATTAIN perfect physical beauty is the bounden duty of every woman, and it nature is deficient in her gifts it is the woman's bounden duty to overcome the defects."

"The woman who does not make herself as beautiful as she possibly can be is not doing her duty by society."

"The study for the attainment and appreciation of physical beauty among women should be a special feature in our educational and religious training. Such are the tenets of a novel women's club which is being promoted in Chicago by Dr. Helen Reynolds Kellogg and is to be called the 'Society for the Promotion of Physical Beauty.'"

Don't you think it is a splendid idea?

I do.

I wish there might be such a club in every town and city in the land.

And I wish that these clubs besides succeeding in making their members more beautiful would also succeed in changing the public attitude towards the woman who tries to be beautiful.

The painters and sculptors who, using paint and clay as their mediums, set to work with the avowed purpose of creating something beautiful are looked upon as public benefactors and men worthy of honor.

The woman who with herself as medium lends her energies towards making that self as beautiful and pleasing as it is possible, is regarded by a great many people as distinctly frivolous.

And yet surely no work of art that the painter or sculptor could produce could possibly be so beautiful or capable of producing as much pleasure as a beautiful woman.

Surely a beautiful woman, walking through the streets of a city, radiating loveliness, vibrating charm, adds much more to the sum of happiness of the community than the most perfect picture or most magnificent sculpture hidden away in the recesses of the art museum.

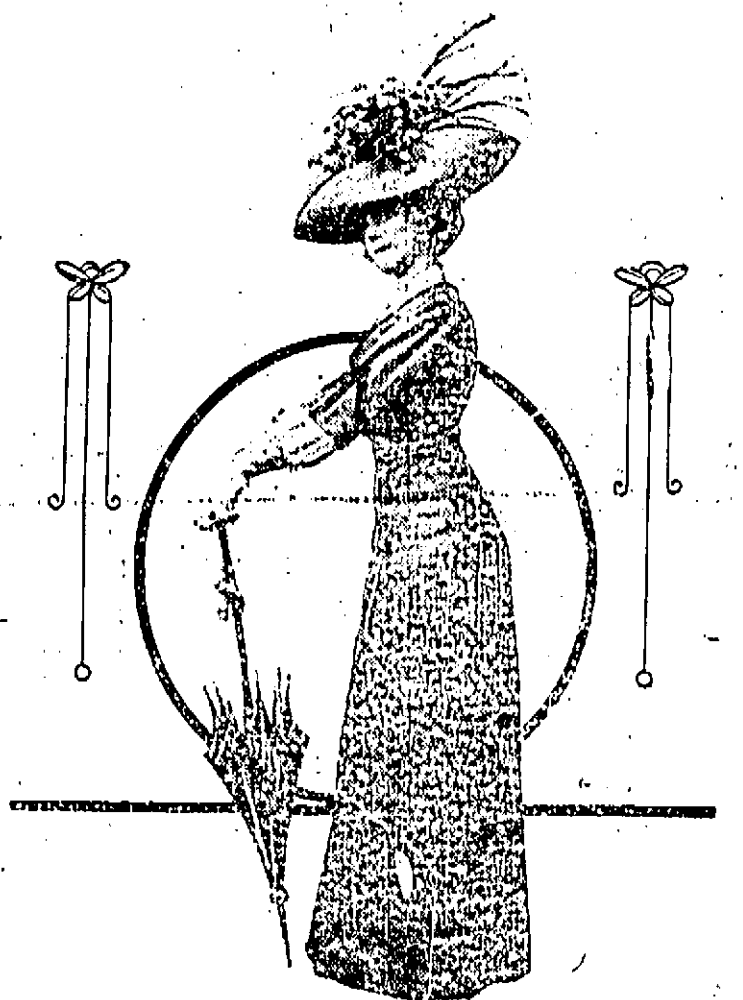

Wherefore, I salute the new club and wish it long life and many members and much success.

Are you still unconvinced that the promotion of beauty is as good an object for a club's effort as civic betterment or the study of Browning?

If you are, let me tell you another fact in its favor. You have doubtless heard of cases where the end justifies the means. Well, this, on the contrary, if you will insist that the end needs justifying, is a case where the means justifies the end.

For if you do not approve of the end which is the pursuit of beauty you will surely approve of the means which is the pursuit of health.

Ruth Cameron

COIN-SPOTTED BLACK AND WHITE SATIN FOULARD COSTUME.

A novel treatment of the tulle idea is seen in this smart little frock. The back and upper portion of the skirt are of side-plaited fouldard, while the lower portion of the front is of plain black satin draped with a gracefully shaped, Russian-braided scarf tulle of the fouldard. Black satin bands define the low cut front of the blouse and trim its short, straight sleeves and a grille of black satin slightly raised at the back outlines the waist. The sleeveless garment is of plain Irish mesh. Coarse insertion and maline and the leatherette hat is trimmed with black velvet, black fancy feathers and white spring flowers.

NEEDFUL KNOWLEDGE

Janesville People Should Learn to Detect the Approach of Kidney Disease.

The symptoms of kidney trouble are so unmistakable that they leave no ground for doubt. Sick kidneys excrete a thick, cloudy, offensive urine, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding. The back aches constantly, headaches and dizzy spells may occur and the victim is often weighed down by a feeling of languor and fatigue. Neglect these warnings and there is danger of dropsy, Bright's disease, or diabetes. Any one of these symptoms is warning enough to begin treating the kidneys at once. Delay often proves fatal.

You can use no better remedy than Down's Kidney Pills. Here's Janesville proof: Mrs. J. Gower, Eastern Ave., Janesville, Wis., says, "About four years ago I suffered from kidney trouble and felt quite miserable for several weeks. A friend who had used Down's Kidney Pills with the best of results, advised me to try them and I procured a supply at the People's Drug Co. Less than the contents of three boxes freed me from the annoyance, and I have not had occasion to use a kidney remedy since. I know Down's Kidney Pills are just exactly as represented."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McMillan Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Down's—and take no other.

INSPIRING THOUGHTS.

By MARY RUSSELL.

There was a notable gathering of wealthy women in Chicago a few days ago. They met in the home of Mrs. Potter Palmer, and their mission was to do something practical in the way of helping poor women. The fact that suffering and want was at their very back doors came as a surprise to many of them. Shielded and sheltered, they did not dream of the crying need at hand.

Half the misery of the world is because the half that might help never knows it is there. It is not possible for the woman with wealth to devote all her time to finding out the real needs of the very poor. The many friends practiced by unscrupulous beggars have made those who would be glad to help grow wary.

The trouble with these women is, and will be that they are not practical. They may be good business women in the way of managing large estates and looking well towards the administration of a large home, but when it comes to understanding how the very poor administer the very small affairs that make up the sum of existence to them, then the worldly women will be at sea.

Even the usual philanthropical writer with a meat in one hand and a market report in the other, will submit a bill of fare for the family that lives on $40 a month and limit the table expenditures to a sum that in most cases will cover the whole of the income.

Either they underestimate or overstate the possibility of the usual income. I have met women who find it difficult to make the expense account balance on a very fair allowance which seemed to feel a sense of indignity and wastefulness in the woman who could not make a dollar a day pay all the living expenses of a family and buy a house as well.

It is a very queer thing that few people are blessed with enough imagination to put themselves in the place of the other woman.

If these women, good and true and earnest, I feel very sure, really desire to help, let them band together to build model lodgings in the poor districts, flat buildings in which will be found some comforts at a reasonable price. Let them institute playrooms for the older children where they can be kept off the streets in the evening until the mother comes home from work. Let there be a baby's ward where the little ones will be kept and fed while the mother is at work. Let them keep a list of the worthy women that come under their care and while never making numbers of them, see that they have the chance, which is all many of them want.

A decent, clean room in a warmed and ventilated house where there is a playground for the older children and a nursery or kindergarten for the babies, and many a woman would ask no odds of the world. She could go out with a serene heart and sew or scrub or clock with a clear mind, which is the largest half of a rested body. A home for the children and a chance to work and few would ask for more.

DAILY DIET HINTS

By DR. T. J. ALLEN
Food Specialist.

DIET AND RHEUMATISM.

Rheumatism is caused, primarily, by the accumulation of waste matter in the system, but while one person contracts rheumatism on a given diet, another is entirely free from it. Weak or inactive kidneys and liver conduce to rheumatism by favoring the accumulation of waste in the system; inactivity of the skin has the same effect. Damps and chills tend to close the pores of the skin, retarding the action of the kidneys, and thus aggravating rheumatism—and hence one of the signs of pain given in an old English poem is, "Old Betty's joints are on the rack." Adverse mental states poison the blood as certainly as do the waste products of food and metabolism, hence the error of supposing that diet only will cure rheumatism or that suggestion alone will cure it. Regulation of diet is fundamental, however. No meat should be eaten by one afflicted with rheumatism, no cheese (except that a little cottage cheese is allowable), no fish, no heavy starch foods, such as fine fresh white bread, bananas and cream, dry whole wheat bread and a little unroasted peanuts (blanched) or walnuts, fresh figs and dates, cabbage (uncooked), melons and apples and lemonade for drink; these are the best foods in rheumatism.

Appertaining to the Knocker. "Sometimes do knocker is no fool, but can mislead," said Uncle Eben. "He's liable to be sacrificed friendship and respect for the sake of intertality a mighty ongrateful audience."

OF LIGHTWEIGHTSMilwaukee Boy Wins Coveted Honor
by Defeating "Battling" Nelson

In Fortieth Round.

Janesville followed through the "squared circle" learned from the Associated Press
last evening that Adolph Wolgast, a young German boy from Milwaukee, was now the lightweight champion of the world through his victory over
"Battling" Nelson, the fighting Dane, at Point Richmond, California, in the fortieth round of what was to have been a forty-five round contest. Wolgast, a twenty-two-year-old boy and a native of Michigan.Around his home town Ad began his fighting career in a modest way in 1908. He took part in thirteen battles in that year, most of them being withuntil his bouts on the coast in 1909 that he began to attract attention.The fight with Eddie Hinton, whom he defeated in nineteen rounds, was the beginning of his march to the title. Jimmy Britt defeated him in the same year in a twenty round bout
in Frisco, but the next year he again went west and knocked out Britt in eighteen rounds.His memorable battle with Joe Gans
at Goldfield, Nev., in 1909, in the menory of fight fans. This fight Nelson lost on a foul after forty-two rounds of the hardest kind of milling. His share of the receipts was $23,000. After this he lost a twenty round decision to Jimmy Britt, and when Rudy Chinholz and Abe Attel put it all over him in ten round bouts on the coast,
it was believed the "Battler" had reached the height of his career.

Tries Again and Wins.

Not dismayed, he finally got another match with Joe Gans for the lightweight title. The "Battler" defeated a negro in seventeen rounds at San Francisco on July 4, 1908, and until he staved off his last fight with Wolgast, he had held the lightweight title. Two months later he again met Gans and settled his supremacy over the negro by knocking him out in twenty-one rounds. Since that time the "Battler" has not engaged in a hard battle, but has taken on some of the lesser lights for short bouts.Nelson in his younger days was fond of fighting. He would walk several miles to see or participate in a boxing contest and no matter how badly he was beaten one day he always showed up the next ready to take more.Edigerton Five To considerable commotion on Milwaukee

Meanwhile some dozen other canines

opportunity and gave the frightened
